Amber Nicole Dilger has been performing professionally throughout the United States since 1995 in musical theatre and concert productions both large and small. From classics like "Camelot," "The Sound of Music," and "Sweeney Todd," to newly created productions like the one-woman show, "Arlington," she shines on stage bringing real human depth to characters of every kind. Equally at home in intimate concert settings, the standards of the Great American Songbook are ones she loves to share with audiences. In addition to performing, Amber Nicole is a licensed music educator and has a strong interest in helping learners of all ages and abilities find their unique voice. Amber Nicole has always been fascinated by the way we communicate as human beings, and loves to combine storytelling with best practices from educational psychology to help make her teaching most effective and enjoyable. She specializes in helping those with performance anxiety learn to work with their fears and share their message with confidence and conviction. Amber Nicole also works as a stage director and music director for children's and community theatre, as well as teaching group classes and individual lessons in her Cary, North Carolina studio and online. In her moments of free time, she enjoys doting on her dog and cat and spending time in nature. She is a member of Actors' Equity Association and the National Association of Teachers of Singing.
